

EXHIBIT 76

Zonadine Chua

From: Mia Simonsen [mia@abetterinternet.com]
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2004 4:48 PM
To: 'Rowntree'
Cc: 'Joshua Abram'; chris@direct-revenue.com
Subject: response

Hi Colin and Angie,

This is the advice as to how to handle the situation. We know of this guy already apparently and he's a small timer.

If you write him the following:

You are not responsible for incoming traffic to your website and you did not buy inventory/traffic from us.
Then also should remind him that you are NOT an adware company and he is mistaken in slandering you on his website.
You may advise him to take down the content or you will commence with legal action, but we do not know how he would respond to that. (might upset him further)

Let me know if you have more questions, just call. Again sorry about such bad timing for you guys.

All the best,
mia

-----Original Message-----

From: Rowntree [mailto:mail@rowntree.net]
Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2004 4:09 PM
To: mia@abetterinternet.com
Subject: Re: hmmmmmm....

okay, legal, but problematic in another way.

we are in the middle of trying to get new business liability insurance (old carrier stopped doing biz in NH) and have spent the last 6 months restructuring a new company to hide the porn. unfortunately, angie's name is on all the insurance apps. unfortunately, go to google.com and type in "Angie Rowntree" complete with home address!

nice.....

colin

On Mar 24, 2004, at 4:04 PM, Mia Simonsen wrote:

> Hey,
> Yes it is legal. We state what they're downloading in terms and > conditions.
> Let me give you a ring and we can talk about it
>

> Thanks,
> Mia

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: Rowntree [mailto:mail@rowntree.net]

> Sent: Wednesday, March 24, 2004 3:37 PM
> To: Mia Simonsen
> Subject: hmmm....
>
>
> angie googled her name today just for fun and look what came up!
> <http://webhelper.netfirms.com/transponders/CosmicVillage.html>
>
> is this thing LEGAL?!?!?!?
>
>
>
