It does exist abetterinternet tries to access the internet at least once a day through a program called randreco which keeps re-installing itself in my temp file. How do I get rid of it?

You have software that utilizes Trojan Horse techniques to place unauthorized and encrypted \"adware\", then turn around and want me to pay for your service to remove it.

I believe that violates US Law.

doesn't make sense.

- 1) what is regenerating the DLL
- 2) if the DLL is running - it is bound to something. worse case, we ask the user to reboot and remove it as a restart

The problem is that mypctuneup actually 'disables' our ad clients, meaning stops them from serving ads, however dll files still reside on their machine which if deleted, regenerate at reboot.

Dan, has any consideration been given to the fact that MyPCTuneUp doesn't remove everything from a user's computer. Several users are writing in, fairly irate about this, and this is happening with several Ad Clients.

My fear is that this can be looked on as trespassing if we aren't making every effort to remove everything from a user's machine. Is there any reason why we have to keep a file on the user's machine?

Dear Sir, thank you for installing your program "abetterinternet" onto my computer. Although this was done somehow without my consent i really do appreciate it.

Now, I have removed it and all of its components, but still have a file or two i can't seem to get rid of.

Just a wild thought?? Will you please send any info that might help me to rid my comp of all aspects of this free "abetterinternet" ??

I just went to the link you sent me, and the scan reports it did not find any Adaware on my system. Well I run a utility call Prevx that reports and monitors all activity on my system and ABETTERINTERNET.COM is on the system.

I guess I am left with no choice but to begin legal action.

Dear Customer,

Sorry for the delayed response to your e-mail.

We are responding to your inquiry about ad software on your PC. mypctuneup.com performs technical support for a number of companies and we are sorry to hear that adware is causing you problems. We will assist you in your uninstallation process.

Please note that pop-up ads are a very common way for smaller and larger website publishers to earn revenue from their business operations.

Many

websites serve pop-up ads to all their users. This means that even a computer that does not have any ad-serving software installed will receive frequent pop-up ads. The occurrence of pop-up ads doesn't necessarily mean that your computer has ad-serving software installed on it.

With that understanding, if the software in question is found on your machine we will remove it completely for you. We have designed an automated tool that we believe is the easiest, most efficient way to provide you with tech support. From our website you can scan your PC and determine whether or not the software is installed on your machine,

and if so, you can then choose to uninstall.

To run the scan you simply click on the link below. Normally there's a monthly charge for individual users but this link allows you to run the scan free of charge.

We hope you find this helpful

Sincerely

The Opt Out team

Dear Sir/Madam,

Thank you for your response. Unfortunately, I appear to be having a bit of trouble removing the adware. I followed the link you supplied and entered the verification code as required. After a short delay while the page assured me that my system was being evaluated, the page displayed a message saying "The results of our evaluation are:" and then nothing more. I then followed "About Us" link which allowed me to use the Free Uninstall Tool again but with the same result. I have restarted my computer and the OZEORDZD.EXE is still running and is still part of my startup task list. If you could assist me further I would be grateful.
