thinkingmedia is the company we set up that holds all of our domain name registrations. I believe olga set up all the phone numbers. supposedly its one of the things that we pay sandra to answer and listen to. I believe the phone number is probably a voicemail to email conversion that sends a wav file to the inbox that sandra is reading.

of course there could be a breakdown anywhere in the process if its not constantly tested.

Yeah - I had called it too. Do you know who set this up? My biggest fear is that however useless the answering machine message is, nobody is listening to the message. Is this one of the fake companies that josh set up?

I called the number and it works, however it is still the stock answering service that came with this system. nobody has ever updated it to say "thank you for calling thinking media" sounds like a $20 answering machine in a basement somewhere. I guess thats why he is saying he cant reach thinking media. Olga, don't you control these numbers and what the answering messages say? Since this is the contact number on all our domain registrations I wonder if it should point somewhere to a real person?

whois thinkingmedia.net shows this to the world...

Dear Madam or Sir,

I have not been able to get through to you via your 1866 839-6164. Could you please give me another contact # with an area code etc... I need to contact you with an extremely urgent matter.

Thanks

Jerry
